Pictures,buttons, and images may appear in different places on our software pages, depending on how we do our layout for each celebrity; however, our functions and methods of access and manueverability will remain constant.
GSEN software supports two separate kits. Kit A is the prerequisite purchase for the overall operation of the entire program. This kit contains the smart card, the smart card terminal, the software CD, and instructions.The smart card terminal hooks to either the Serial or the USB port. The terminal is the tool that allows the smart card to communicate with the software. After Kit A has been purchased and loaded, the cardholder may expand his collection of celebrity endorsed smart cards through the purchase of Kit B. This kit conatins only the smart card, the software CD, and appropriate instructions. Purchase of an additional smart card terminal is not necessary, as the one contained in Kit A is the only one needed for an individual computer on which the GSEN smart card will be used. As the user adds additional celebrity cards to his collection, the CD software will add the new celebrity's images and name to boxes 1, 2, 3, and 4. Boxes 1 and 4 are image boxes. Box 2 is a pull-down box that lists the name of each celebrity card on the computer (both from Kit A and Kit B). From that box, the user may select one of the other desired celebrities. When that happens, all corresponding boxes change to match the newly selected celebrity. When the "Go" button at #3 is activated, it sends the user to the main front page of the software.

This form represents GSEN's personal pages applications, which consist of entry, storage, and edit capabilities for credit cards and ship-to and ship-from addresses for easy record keeping and on-line shopping procedures. This form also allows memory space for storage of personal favorite sites, as well as travel information, favorite causes, and an all-important homework links for kids.
Button 1 takes the user to the pin-number-required credit card and address page, where the user may enter numerous credit cards and corresponding billing addresses for those cards, as well as ship-to and ship-from addresses for on-line shopping ease. While shopping on line, the user can conveniently drag and drop credit card and shipping information into the on-line merchant's order and shipping information forms. This is possible because the GSEN application can run simultaneously beside the merchant's.
Button 2 takes the the user to the edit application for the credit card and address information, where the user can add, delete or otherwise change the information contained here.
Button 3 is the SmartKids homework links page. When a user inserts the smart card, he is immediately taken to the celebrity's site. At the same time this is taking place, the GSEN site is notified to begin filling in the homework links for the user to access. From that point, the user saves the links to the smart card, which locks out anyone else from accessing that user's software.
Button 4 takes the user to the form where he can save his favorite URLs to his personal page settings. For security purposes, this page is pin-number access only.
Button 5 delivers the user to some of the best travel, shopping and services available on the Web.
Buttons 6 & 7 provide direct access to some of the most popular non-profits and charities, such as Victory Junction Gang, a Petty Enterprises developed special camp for children with incurable and rare diseases.
